

Doctoral Colloquium

The research and doctoral colloquium of the professorship for ABWL, Personal & organization takes place at least once a year. At these – for usually 1.5 days - workshop events are available to the Doctoral students the opportunity to give lectures of approx. 20-30 minutes (plus approx. 30 minutes afterwards discussion) about their work progress as well as selected problems in connection with the preparation of her dissertation to report.

In addition to the direct benefit for the respective speakers the lectures and discussions were also valuable for the audience Insights into general (research question-independent) problems and Challenges of scientific work on a dissertation.

In order to ensure a constant discussion process and work progress, all supervised doctoral students are expected to have at least a corresponding lecture on the current status every second colloquium of their research project. Exceptions to this rule require the reason.

In addition, to avoid that the participants of the colloquium devote their attention exclusively to their own presentation moreover, it is imperative that (at least) the speakers over the entire are present for the duration of the respective colloquium. Again require Exceptions to this rule of justification.
